Program

Repairing Windows: Worth the Pane

Skilled technicians from Banks Glass of Jamestown repaired windows in the restored Curtin Mansion (1897), Keeping Time VI's site visit. Mark and Jon Banks and Steve Baker of Banks Glass will demonstrate how to work with vintage windows rather than replace them. However, if repair is not an option because of extensive deterioration, a representative of Andersen Windows will show examples of windows appropriate for various building styles. Banks and Andersen will have displays for viewing during lunch and breaks.

Advocacy: Hear! Hear!

Cindy Heitzman, Executive Director of the California Preservation Foundation in San Francisco, directs this statewide organization's advocacy program which helped bring about the historical building code, Mills Act, California Register and more thorough CEQA review of impacts to heritage resources. How CPF's advocacy program works and how to participate will be part of her presentation along with an update on pending legislation giving state income tax credits to owners of qualified properties. She will conclude with successful advocacy studies involving the Napa County Hall of Records and the Monterey County Jail.

Funding: Do Your Homework First!

Linda Dick-Bissonnette, Ph.D., cultural specialist for California State Parks, will detail the homework she has completed for the 1856 Braquehai-Burns Cottage, a commercial/residential complex needing restoration before it can be opened to the public. In preparation for our visit to the Wilson-McConnell home (1879) she will give an overview of preservation there to date. Craig Mineweaser, preservation architect with offices in San Jose and the Sonora area, will stress the importance of a Historic Structure Report and a Condition Assessment for buildings in need of grant-funded improvements.

Site Visits

With a six figure visitor count and a wealth of historic buildings to preserve and showcase there are always projects that need undertaking. State Parks personnel will lead us to the Wilson-McConnell home (1879) where foundation work has been completed and to a second building on site with a newly rebuilt floor. ADA compliance for access at other buildings and for walking surfaces will also be on the tour.

Creative Mitigation: Golf Links and Web Links

Cultural sites related to Native Americans, Chinese, Mexicans, gold mining, homesteading and ranching are features of a golf course in Angels Camp. Reba Fuller, Governmental Affairs Specialist with the Tuolumne Band of Me-Wuk Indians, will show how creative mitigation saved these heritage sites and, at the same time, led to a one-of-a-kind golf course. Mitigation fees in Calaveras County have been used to create a history-based website. Julia Costello, Ph.D., an archeologist, will discuss using the internet to tell about Calaveras County's rich history. She will also relate how two histories required as mitigation for large county and federal projects became books available to the public.

SHOW TIME!

Does your city, county, or jurisdiction have a Preservation Element, Ordinance, Historic Sites Survey, Design Guidelines, brochures, or other planning tools that you are particularly proud of? If so, please bring copies of these resource materials to the conference to share and provide inspiration to others. If you plan to participate in "SHOW TIME," please check the box marked "SHOW TIME" on the registration form.
